uit the Democracy? Our word for it, the ticket would be popular in the solid south. It could all be arranged at the approaching Cleveland-Davis meeting in Atlanta. - Cincinnati

Times Star.

Grover and Jefferson have some principles in common; they are democrats, always and in all circumstances, and they agree in their opinion that the pensioning of union veterans is a thing that can be overdone. Still, we do not believe that the nomination of such a ticket would make the South solid, unless, possibly it might be solid against the ticket. A very large number of southern democrats hold Jeff Davis responsible for precipitating them into a war with the Federal government for which they were not prepared and for which they had no liking, and in many portions of the south he is more unpopular, f possible, than he is in Ohio. We have not yet reached ar lucal state of perfection, but it is entirely out of sympathy with Jeff Devis. As a matter of course the ...row-brained, irreconcilable Bourbons, north and south, still worship him as a saint. Then, let us add Mr. Cleveland is not overly popular in the south.
